

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A plurality of repeaters are inserted in a signal transmission line connecting together two functional blocks in a semiconductor device, wherein each of the repeaters includes first and second inverters cascaded in this order along the direction of signal transmission in the signal transmission line. The first inverter has a higher current driveability than the second inverter for achieving a smaller overall signal propagation delay.